

Rockledge Golf Club:

Where traditional design, modern amenities meet

History and tradition are the hallmarks of golf, and Rockledge Golf Club in West Hartford is steeped in both.

It's one of central Connecticut's oldest public courses, featuring holes that run parallel to each other and separated by lines of older trees and landscaping that suits the land. The old-course charm is defined by the rolling terrain and many creeks, streams and brooks that meander through the course.

This rich tradition is why

Rockledge is so often the site of major tournaments. The course has hosted multiple CT Women's Amateur Championships as well as other state amateur events and qualifiers.

Rockledge also has been the training ground of many top players, including former LPGA member Elizabeth Janangelo Caron. The legendary Julius Boros often played at Rockledge, and PGA Tour great Tommy Armour once served as head professional.

Overall, Rockledge plays 6,440 yards from the back tees with a rating of 71.1 and a slope of 127. Four sets of tees enable you to choose the best distance for your game.

Rockledge takes pride in offering a first-rate experience for players. The goal is to provide customer service that golfers typically find only at private courses.

Although proud of its traditional heritage, Rockledge has worked to maintain the playability of the course while recognizing how technology has affected the game. Carts are equipped with GPS, and recent drainage upgrades and tee placements have allowed Rockledge to improve the course yet maintain its best qualities.

Rockledge features many amenities, including a spacious driving range, practice area and a modern clubhouse with full restaurant and bar available to host outside events.
